Hi Tala,
Nancy had the following edits and Alex is good with the responses once these edits are made. Thanks
M

Probably a few at present, but certainly not all the hundreds people are alleging are out there...that is why it is in the medium- and long-term parts of the Action Plan

Thanks Tala. Question: Do we have enough information on the different categories of PFAS to do TEF or would TEF be an approach we could do in a few years when more research is complete?

Below are the answers; we already talked to Jerry once and he is “up” on the concepts, so this is not too technical for him.

I would like Andy Gillespie in ORD to look at the yellow paragraph...im waiting to hear back from him

TSCA PFAS Team – Thanks for the briefing call earlier in the week. Jerry Couri followed up with the question below about PFAS subclasses. Please take a look and let me know our response.
Best,

Sven:

Following up from the conversation the other day, can PFAS chemicals be divided into subclasses for review based on chemical structure, physical and chemical properties, and predicted biologic activity? Would this make sense for the Agency's purposes?
